

For more great ideas on how to live your life go to thesun.co.uk/liveit

GIVE ME MONEY, HONEY - MADELINE

ONLY DATES MILLIONAIRES

Even in caveman times, women went for men with the biggest caves

WHILE most women worry about a man's looks or sense of humour on a blind date, Madeline Amber only has one concern - the size of his wallet.

The self-confessed gold-digger does not expect to pay a penny when she is with a man and admits she only dates blokes with a huge bank balance.

The 22-year-old, from Manchester, says: "A sense of humour doesn't pay the bills. I spend hours looking good so I expect to be treated like a princess by any man who wants to date me."

"Before I started dating millionaires, I went out with normal guys and got bored stupid."

"They took me to Pizza Express and would ask me to pay half the bill. It's a disgraceful way for a man to behave."

"I like going to expensive restaurants and being spoilt rotten. That's how real men treat their women. I certainly don't expect to pay a penny."

Model Madeline decided she would quit dating regular guys when a man she met on a blind date starting working out the bill on his mobile phone. She says: "I was mortified. The date had gone badly anyway, and when he started tapping away on his calculator to work out how much I had to pay I felt sick.

By DULCIE PEARCE

"Once he'd worked out how much I owed, he dumped a handful of change on the table and counted out coppers. I nearly died of embarrassment. From that moment on I promised myself never to date a poor man ever again."

Having gone out with her first millionaire three years ago, Madeline got a taste for the high life and targeted a string of rich men to meet through specialist website golddiggers.uk.com.

She now believes she has finally hit the jackpot with her THIRTEENTH millionaire boyfriend, 36-year-old entrepreneur Jordan Ali.

She says: "Jordan has taken me to movie premieres, celebrity events and on amazing holidays. I am treated like a princess every day. It's the way every woman should live."

Madeline, pictured far right with some of her wealthy exes, was 19 and living with her parents when she first met a man who held the key to her heart - lots of money.

She recalls: "We were in a bar and he was good-looking, tall and had dark hair and green eyes. But it wasn't until I glanced down at his wrist and saw he was wearing a shiny Rolex that I was truly interested. He asked if he could buy me a glass of champagne then changed his mind and told the barman to make it a bottle.

"After an hour chatting he asked if we could meet again so I gave him my number. But unlike normal guys who think they have to wait three days to get in contact so they appear elusive, he phoned the next day.

"He was clearly too busy with work to play games, which made him all the more interesting. And instead of arranging to meet at the train station or in a pub, he picked me up in his Mercedes. I felt I was living the lifestyle I always deserved."

RICH PICKINGS . . . with Jordan

Madeline embarked on an eight-month affair with the 30-year-old financier.

She says: "His apartment was in the same area as all the Manchester United footballers and was amazing."

"One day I was sitting in his lounge flicking through a magazine and I said how much I liked a Chloe bag worth £1,000 that I saw. The next day he bought it for me."

"Most of the millionaires I've dated have been like that. They like treating their women and making them happy."

After the couple eventually split, it was not long before Madeline began dating another wealthy man, this time from the Middle East.

She says: "Within a week he had whisked me off to Dubai. But I made it clear I wasn't easy - I certainly wouldn't have sex after a few dates just because the man had money."

"In fact, I always ask for a separate room when I am taken anywhere - I like to get ready in my own time."

Madeline dumped him when he started talking about marriage after only a few dates.

"I may love millionaires but I'm too young to be someone's wife," she says. While some people may think that Madeline is shallow, she has a different take on life. She says: "Women may think I have no morals but it's a fact that all females like to be looked after financially."

"Even back in caveman times, women went for the man with the biggest cave."

"I find the power and drive of millionaires so sexy - I'm only attracted to men with money and I'm not ashamed to say so."

Now Madeline feels she is ready to commit to millionaire No13 Jordan, who made his fortune through property and film. They met six months ago through the golddiggers website.

She says: "I know people may think it's degrading to meet people on a site like that, but it's just a way of meeting like-minded people."

"The men know they are getting a sexy woman to spoil and the women know they will be treated as a woman should be."

Jordan says: "Madeline may have been out with millionaires, but that's because she likes the lifestyle they can give her."

"It doesn't bother me in the slightest, to be honest, it was the reason I went on the dating site in the first place - it gets the money part out of the way."

"We are made for each other, I love spoiling her rotten and she certainly deserves it."

MEN OF NOTES . . . Madeline with four of the 13 millionaires she has dated in the last three years